

Pointer: Ask one, answer ten. Raise one, understand three. Seeing the rabbit he lets loose the falcon. He uses the wind to fan the flame; he doesn't spare his eyebrows. This I leave aside for the moment. How is it when entering the tiger's lair? To test, I'm citing this old case. Look!

KŌAN: A monk asked Yun Men, “How is it when the tree withers and the leaves fall?”<sup>1</sup> Yun Men said, “Body exposed in the golden wind.”<sup>2</sup>

Notes: 1. What season is this? When the family breaks up, the people perish; when the people perish, the family breaks up. 2. He holds up the sky and supports the earth. He cuts nails and shears through iron. Clean and naked, bare and purified.
